Heads of State vs. Heads of Government

Before diving into the list, it's useful to distinguish the two main roles that often appear together:

- President or Monarch – The official head of state. In republics, this is usually the president; in constitutional monarchies, it is the monarch.
- Prime Minister – The head of government, responsible for running the day-to-day affairs of the country. In many systems, the prime minister is the most powerful political figure.

Some countries, such as the United States, combine both roles in a single person (the president), while others have a ceremonial president and a powerful prime minister (e.g., France).
